MEN WITHOUT A COUNTRY.

THE slacker is drifting into the maelstrom from which there is no escape. Every side to which he turns he finds the recruiting officers waiting with open arms to receive him. Since the United States became identified with the allied nations at war with Germany and Austria an understanding has been reached by which every one of the entente nations is welcome to come to this country and draft its own subjects and citizens for warfare under their respective flags. Even those who have taken out their first papers as American citizens will not be exempt from impressment. If they have succeeded in outwitting the American conscription by refusal to register or by registering as the subject of a foreign power, these slackers will eventually find themselves in the front rank of their own country's forces and fighting for less than one-third the compensation paid by the United States. Already arrangements have been made for recruiting officers from Great Britain, France and Italy to come hither and pick out their respective subjects and take them over the water where they will make excellent fodder for cannon. European nations do not indulge in any of the legal amenities that delay justice in this country and when a man is nabbed he goes nilly willy and goes right to the front of the firing line in spite of all the protests he may conjure in hope of softening the sentence. The only outlet is over the border into Mexico where it is doubtful if many men with any realization of conditions care to trust their corporeal selves. Foreign countries will not be guided by American laws in taking subjects under their control, but will be governed entirely by their own laws which have a wider range than what was ever contemplated by this country on the third or fourth call. For instance, Great Britain wants all her subjects between the ages of 18 and 45, and those she wants will have to get ready to go for there is no falling back on their American citizenship unless they have registered as Americans in process of naturalization. It is estimated that at least 500,000 subjects of the English crown reside in this country and most of them who remain here do so for the reason that they seek to escape service with their colors. Since the beginning of the war over half a million British subjects found their way across the Atlantic and over the Canadian border to volunteer, so it is presumed that the remainder consists largely of slackers who stay in this country for the sake of dodging the recruiting officer. Italy is also presenting its claims and Russia will follow suit as soon as order is brought forth from chaos. From these statements it must appeal that the slacker of other nations would do better under the Stars and Stripes with his dollar a day and everything found besides the prospect of a substantial pension rather than go back to his mother country to fight for a franc or a shilling a day. No one will repine over this excellent arrangement which means everything to our own nation and our allies for whom we are fighting as earnestly as though we were the primary cause of the war.

NEVADA BLOOD NEEDED.

POOR old San Francisco! The name that once was sufficient to conjure the shekels out of a miser's clutches is now the synonym for niggardly economy and the pitiful whine of poverty. Imagine San Francisco, the home of millionaires, the pride of the Pacific coast, and the vaunted treasure house of trans-Pacific commerce, emitting a groan over the call of the country for the use of money that is piling up in idle fortunes only to be dissipated in extravagances and outrageous living. San Francisco needs a little of the good red blood of Nevada, which at one time made that city by the Golden Gate famous as the most royal entertainer and the most lavish in hospitality. What has become of the descendants of the erstwhile bonanza kings from Nevada whose generosity was heralded around the world, whose prodigality made San Francisco known as one of the seven wonders of the universe? These were the millionaires from the Sagebrush State who built palaces to adorn the home of their adoption. They brought the virility of the Comstock to their new place of residence and they began spending money with a lavishness that earned the undying admiration of the whole world. They gave freely of their gold and silver to build cable systems that laced the floor of the world's oceans, they organized armadas that placed the American flag on the seven seas, they crisscrossed the continent with steel sinews that knitted east and west and united the Atlantic and Pacific commerce in bonds of trade. It was Nevada that gave San Francisco the reputation of being the home of opulence and the last word in royal entertainments. Our men distributed their double eagles with greater diligence than the beggars gathered kopecks in front of the Moscow cathedral on charity Sunday. They were the men who did things and did them without a flourish when the deed was for the welfare of their country. They gave freely of their wealth and never thought of asking for any compensation but posterity seems to have become tainted with the money grabbing and money hoarding instinct since the passing of the pioneers of the Comstock.

San Francisco was asked to raise $140,000,000 of the Liberty Loan and, after straining every nerve in a heartbreaking and purse tightening contest, the results are seen in the announcement from Washington that San Francisco, which boasts of being the richest city on the Pacific Coast, has been the smallest contributor. A trifle over 25 per cent of the allotment was raised in San Francisco after a drive lasting for the past two weeks. It would seem preposterous to refer to the statement issued by the Liberty Bond committee of San Francisco last week to the effect that after a hard day's drive with every bank and every industry absorbed in the task of raising funds for the Liberty Loan that exactly $45,000 was subscribed in a whole day. Imagine what this means—$45,000 from the richest section of the business and financial district and the canvassers thought this impulse was such a notable feat that they spread the news broadcast over the wires of every metropolitan paper in the country. Nothing was said about a modest little industrial center in Nevada where the people subscribed an average of $250 each and attached their signatures to contracts for $15,000. That is the Nevada way of doing it.

San Francisco sits like a gaudily bedizened Jezebel on the heights overlooking the grandest port in the world, but always clamoring for more and with all a strumpet's predilection for filthy lure turning a deaf ear to entreaty and anguish which might lure some of the pelf from her pocket.

San Francisco is an ingrate. That city was saved from looting by the prompt action of Uncle Sam's boys when the earthquake upset all authority and turned loose a reign of lawlessness. At that time Uncle Sam's boys took over the government under the able management of the gallant General Funston and brought back order and placed the city on its feet.

San Francisco has always insisted on getting more than its share of all government contracts and today is luxuriating in a war boom arising from the building of warships and commercial argosies in greater proportion than any other port. This success was achieved through the exercise of a lusty pull with congress.

San Francisco brags that it has a greater export trade with the Orient than any other American port. Such was the result of war time policy paid for by the rest of the country. San Francisco pockets the profits and stubbornly refuses to yield up a cent in the way of support for the government, which has been so generous in adding to her wealth.

San Francisco enjoys a mint, coast guard station headquarters, army headquarters, naval headquarters and a sub-treasury, for all of which the people of the United States are taxed. San Francisco wants to retain these and secure a whole lot more, but she reluctantly extends nominal support to the nation in the hour of distress.

San Francisco begged several million dollars from Uncle Sam to start the Panama-Pacific exposition. San Francisco is always there with the big mitt and the sandbag when funds are to be extorted from the national treasury, but she is long of promise and short of fulfillment.

Poor old San Francisco! Lymphatic, effeminate, ease loving, tango trotting, the courtesan of the civic cabaret, whose love responds only to the clink of gold and whose affections are warped by thoughts of retaining the almighty dollars.

Nevadans are no longer there to give the thrill of patriotism to public life. The giants of the sixties have passed to their rewards. Nothing is left but a race of mammoth worshipping usurers who grudge a farthing to save the country if that farthing failed to go out on the waters of life and fail to return in the form of golden nuggets. They are the men who bombarded and pestered congress for a Pacific fleet of dreadnaughts to keep the yellow men from their door. These Shylocks have importuned congress for special protective legislation and even tried to embroil the United States in war with Japan but when the first echoes of shotted guns reverberate over the ocean they make haste to bury their fortunes where the taxgatherer or their country cannot reach it while still holding out their itching palms for the backsheep of the Arab mendicant.

GOLD GRABATING TO BANK OF JAPAN

(By Associated Press.)
TOKIO, June 12.—Japan's holdings of gold reached about $410,000,000 on May 14, an increase of $6,500,000 over the previous week, says a report of the finance department.

This is the highest record in Japan's financial history. The government share in the figure is $172,000,000, while that of the Bank of Japan is $238,000,000.

The largest portion of this record figure is kept overseas. There is $288,500,000 deposited or invested in London and New York while only $121,500,000 is kept at home.
